

December 2009

Armajaro is pleased to announce the expansion of its coffee operations into East Africa. Armajaro's entry into this very important coffee region will extend our Arabica and Robusta sourcing capabilities to meet the growing requirements of our international coffee roaster customers.

The expansion into various East African coffee origins will also allow us to further expand our large soft commodity footprint in Africa and therefore enhance our ability to offer traceable and sustainable coffee schemes. Armajaro's initiatives in cocoa, and in particular our involvement in the not-for-profit organization Source Trust, demonstrate the importance to Armajaro of the Africa region and of the need to structure our supply chain to support the ethical sourcing of the commodities we trade.

Some key appointments have been made in December 2009 to allow for the set-up of a coffee sourcing and trading business in the region in early 2010, which will be coordinated from a soon-to-be-established regional office in Nairobi. Further information on our new regional set-up will be provided in due course.
